MEDICINES.

MEDICAL REMEDIALS

Success of the Age.

eight months of

Consumption, Kidney Affections, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Liver Complaint, Eye Affections, Deafness, Dyspepsia, Piles, Headache, Fever, Nervousness, Chronic Diarrhœa, St. Vitus's Dance, Erysipelas, Dropsy, Female Weakness, Tumors, Ulcers, Emanating from Impure Blood.

THESE MEDICINES

are the favorite prescription of one of the oldest and most learned physicians in the United States, and are prepared by him with the utmost care and skill. Having been for many years associated with a number of distinguished physicians, he has had the advantage of their counsel and co-operation in every case of importance, and has been enabled to bring to bear upon the various diseases to which they are severally applicable the most skilful and successful treatment that the present state of medical science has developed. Every ingredient is subjected to a rigid chemical analysis, to ascertain its purity and freedom from adulteration, before it is allowed to enter into the composition of these medicines, and every process is conducted with the greatest care and exactness, in accordance with the directions of the author, who has had the benefit of an extensive practice of more than twenty years, during which time he has made himself perfectly familiar with the nature and effects of every remedial agent employed in the treatment of disease. Hence, in offering these medicines to the public, the proprietor feels confident that he is not only supplying a want long felt by the afflicted, but that he is also placing within their reach the most perfect remedies that have ever been discovered for the cure of the various diseases for which they are recommended.

Sold by Druggists everywhere.

Notice to Owners of Maine Central R. R. Bonds.

THE holders of the Bonds of the Penobscot and Kennebec Railroad, due in August next, can now exchange their securities and receive a Bond of the Maine Central R. R., having twenty-eight years to run, bearing interest at seven per cent. and principal and interest payable in gold, at the same rate.

It will be perceived that by this arrangement the holder of the bond gets over one per cent. interest more than he has received on the old bond; while the security of the new is also more than upon the former loan.

It is also proposed to exchange these new securities for the Maine Central Bonds due from October 1, 1870, to May 1, 1871, and parties will readily see the advantage in changing, as they will thereby get their investment into a class upon which per cent. than upon undoubted security is at present to be had.

Holders will please communicate with their First National Bank of Portland without delay, in person or by letter.

JAMES H. DRUMMOND,
President Maine Central R. R.

Parties in Bangor and vicinity, holding the above named Bonds, can make the exchange at the First National Bank in Bangor, where a limited amount of the new Bonds are for sale.

THE FRENCH LEADERS.

The three men at the head of the three great columns of the French army, MacMahon, Canrobert and Bazalaet, are nearly of the same age, a year or two over sixty.

MacMahon is of Irish descent. Like Canrobert, he was a cadet of St. Cyr; while Bazaine rose from the ranks. He showed considerable courage at the storming of the gate at Constantine, in the Algerine wars; his command carried the Malakoff in the Crimean war, and he was created Marshal of France and Duke of Magenta for winning the battle of the same, in the war in Italy, in command of the Second Corps. He is personally known to the King of Prussia, having attended his coronation as Ambassador Extraordinary from the French Court. He has since been Governor-General of Algeria, and now goes to the Rhine for immediate active operations.

Francois Certain de Canrobert, who has been one of the steadiest adherents of the present Emperor, was conspicuous in Algiers, in Paris, at the time of the coup d'etat, when he commanded one of the divisions of the Army of the Capital, and in the Crimea. He was wounded both at the Alma and at Inkerman. He succeeded St. Arnaud in the chief command of the French troops, but yielded the command, in turn, to Pelissier, in consequence of a disagreement with Lord Raglan. He was at Magenta and Solferino, in the Italian war.

The third leader, who has just come to the front, Francois Achille Bazaine, was trained to arms in that practical school, which made so many soldiers, the Algerine subjugation, and played a part at the surrender of Abd-el-Kader. He arrived at Sebastopol the very day on which the bombardment was opened, and having contributed materially to its reduction, especially in the capture of Kornilow, one of the outposts of the great Russian fortress, he was appointed military governor of the town upon the retreat of the Russian forces. It will be recollected how speedily he put Juarez to flight in succeeding to the command of the French in Mexico, and also how promptly he was recalled to France when Napoleon saw his blunder in attempting to establish the Empire in that country. As his master deals repair that blunder in a war of extermination, and in two seconds more the Austrian lines would be separated, it may well be supposed that Bazaine, in carrying on this war, will ardently desire to efface the humiliation of his inglorious exit from the Mexican scene.

Marshal Vaillant (Jean Baptiste Philibert) is the oldest General in the French army, having reached his eightieth year. He was born in the Department of Isere, studied in the Polytechnic, served in the artillery in the Grand Army in Russia, participated in the battles of Ligny and Waterloo, was engaged in the siege of Antwerp in 1832, took a leading command of the engineers in Algeria, was Minister of War during the struggle with Russia in 1854, and Minister of the Imperial Household and Grand Marshal of the palace and Senator of France.

Changarnier is seventy-seven years old. He was a pupil of the Academy of St. Cyr, belonged to the body-guard of Louis XVIII, won distinction in Algeria, and had command of the National Guard in the days preceding the coup d'etat. His arrest at midnight by Louis Napoleon, and subsequent banishment from France, are freshly remembered. He returned to his estates of the Seine and Loire after the general amnesty, has been made a Marshal and placed in command of the reserves.

General Comte de Montauban (Count de Palikao), who has attained the age of seventy-seven, served in Algeria with credit, but is principally remembered lately for having led the Peking force, after the arrest of the Pekin envoy, to the capture of Pekin. His title is derived from his victory over the Chinese army at Palikao. He is the commander of the Eighth Military Division and of the Fourth Army Corps, with its headquarters at Lyons.

Marshal Forey, sixty-six years old, was educated at St. Cyr, and saw his earliest service in Algeria. He most remarkable incident was the repulse of the Austrians at Montebello, 20th May, 1859. He commanded the French expedition to seat Maximilian on the throne of Mexico, but soon gave way to Bazaine, and returned to Paris.

Gen. De Goyon, Gen. Lebrun and Count De Monzel are the oldest officers. Marshals De Castellane and Baraguay d'Hilliers and Count Vaubert are dead, and will probably not take the field.

THE PRUSSIAN COMMANDERS.

The famous Prussian commanders in the war, Count Moltke, believed to have planned the campaign which ended in the great battle of Sadowa.

Baron Charles Bernard Bardo Von Moltke, eldest son of the Prussian forces, was born at Gnewitz, in Mecklenburg, and is in the present time about 70 years of age.

He first entered the service of Denmark, but upon entering with the Germans in the project of annexing Schleswig, in 1822, he entered the Prussian service in which he was promoted in 1832 to a place in the Staff. He spent several years in travelling over the continent pursuing his military studies, and after filling several important missions and department offices he was appointed in 1858 chief of staff of the army, which position he now holds in the Schleswig-Holstein controversy he is the predominant part, and in the war between Austria and Prussia he organized and conducted the campaign, and to him, more than to Bismarck was due the success of the war. At the battle of Sadowa General Von Moltke was on the field near the person of the King during the fight, under his and direction the army advanced towards Vienna. He arranged the truce which resulted in the ceding, the triumph of Prussia and for his services received from King William the decoration of the Order of the Black Eagle. Since that time, and until the breaking out of the present war between France and Prussia, General Von Moltke has been engaged in the study of his vocation, being more not alone as a soldier, but as the author of several standard military works.

Prince Frederick William, who is to command the armies of South Germany is 39 years of age. In 1858 he married the Princess Royal of England and has two sons and three daughters. He commanded the army of the Oder at Sadowa, and aside from a somewhat [illegible] and undecided disposition, proved himself an able commander. In the German Italian campaign he was at first underrated, but the conduct of the war on both the [illegible] upon him and he had control of the troops throughout the [illegible], backed, of course, by Von Moltke.

Prince Frederick Charles, who will command the army of the North, is 42 years of age. During the first Schleswig-Holstein war he was a Captain of the Guard and in 1861 was made a General, and continued the Prussians [illegible] Danes. During the last war, in command of three army corps he marched on the 23d of June into Saxony, pushed on into Bohemia, won on the 28th

THE WAR.

Our news from Europe thus far has been confined to the gathering of armies, the skirmishing of diplomacy and a general bustle of military preparation throughout the whole Continent. Large bodies of both French and Prussian troops have already been concentrated at strategic points along the border, but as yet the hostile forces seem waiting to fully organize their plans before striking the blow which shall be the signal for general battle.

Meanwhile ambassadors are flying hither and thither, and either nation is calling to its aid all the powerful allies who can be induced to espouse their quarrel. Thus far we have no official assurance that any of the other Powers have taken part.

Holland, Belgium and the smaller countries eagerly proclaim their neutrality, while England threatens war if the Low Countries are interfered with by either side.

Austria is reported as declaring for France and Russia it is asserted will favor Prussia, but the statement, however probable, lacks confirmation, and it is doubtful that either will embroil themselves unless compelled.—Russia's only interest in the war would be the crippling of France with ulterior designs on the Bosphorus, and her advance in that direction would provoke general war, while Austria, although anxious to avenge Sadowa, will be reluctant as a German power to fight against the Fatherland. Spain seems too much at the mercy of France to war upon her, and while Italy is the natural ally of France the friendship of Prussia in 1866 may restrain her from assuming hostilities.

We can only speculate, however, as the slightest event may tumble any or even all these nations into an exasperating war which shall leave a fearful wreck of fallen thrones, divided kingdoms, and impoverished peoples. The sympathies of the various nations with one or the other of the combatants have been partially foreshadowed, and the excitement of a grand war may swallow up discontent, but looking at it coolly the quarrel is selfish, unjust and to all appearances unnecessary.

Napoleon fights to strengthen the foundations on which he would plant his dynasty, and Bismarck announces that nothing but the dethronement of the Bonapartes will satisfy Germany. When these two men can disturb the peace of the world on so slight a pretext, Europe can make little boast of the progressive civilization of the nineteenth century.

SUICIDE OF THE FRENCH MINISTER.

A Washington dispatch announces that M. Prevost Paradol, the French Minister, who arrived here last week and was received by the President on Saturday, committed suicide yesterday morning at one o'clock by shooting himself with a pistol. He had been very busy since his arrival, and on Tuesday his mind seemed to be wandering, though he continued to give attention to business during the afternoon. The only cause which can be assigned for his rash act is that he was laboring under temporary insanity produced by unusual fatigue and the intense heat.

M. Paradol shot himself in his sleeping chamber, and the circumstances show that the act was premeditated. The inmates of the house at the time were his housekeeper and a French serving man. The woman heard the report of the pistol and rushed to the room, where she found Paradol lying dead on the floor, bleeding from the left breast, the ball having entered immediately over the heart. The weapon used was a small single-barrel, breech-loading Colt's pistol, found on the floor under him. He evidently cut Tuesday and purchased a pair of these pistols. The other was found on his bureau with a cartridge beside it.

Harris and Mann, undertakers, were sent for at an early hour yesterday morning, but it was not known that M. Paradol had killed himself until after daylight, as the servants were timid about going on the street at night in a strange city. The body was embalmed and prepared for burial. Nothing further will be done until the arrival of M. Berthemy from New York.

M. Paradol had prepared himself for bed, but had evidently remained up for some time meditating suicide. He had undressed on but his night clothes and, apparently stood facing the fire-place, near the centre of the room, when he discharged the pistol. The body was found lying on the back with one leg drawn up and the left arm outstretched above the head.

The French Minister took possession of his house on Friday last, and Sunday evening sent his son and daughter, who accompanied him to this country, to Newport R. I., intending to join them in a few days, to spend the Summer. He left a note saying, "I will kill myself. M. Berthemy can come back and live."

A Coroners' inquest was held at 7 o'clock last evening at the late residence of M. Paradol. There were present and the others, besides the Jurors, M. Dijai the Secretary of the French Legation; M. [illegible] Secretary of the Prussian Legation [illegible] and the Marquis de Chambrun. The [illegible] posed of citizens, assembled in the [illegible] over the body lay. The corpse was [illegible] verdict, showing a wound directly [illegible] art.—The Jury then withdrew [illegible] mained in which the suicide [illegible] Djurdjura was the first [illegible] He testified that he was [illegible] Tuesday in Pennsylvania [illegible] while walking together, M. Par[illegible] he wanted to buy a pistol. [illegible] seemed to dissuade him from doing [illegible] at he was nervous; but the M[illegible] d on buying a pistol, and for the [illegible] ent to Savage's where one was purchased. On Monday the Minister wrote him a note which was subsequently handed to him. He was about breaking it open, but was requested by the Minister not to do so unless some accident should happen to him. After hearing of the suicide Wednesday morning, at 9 o'clock, he opened the note. Although written on Monday it is dated July 21st. The translation is as follows:—

"If any accident should happen, I pray M. Djurdjura to attend with M. Beigs and the General Counsel at New York, and M. de Rasent home. I hope that the measures to be taken will be facilitated by my friends, that I may have made in the United States.

(signed) PREVOST PARADOL."

M. Djurdjura said his valet to-day brought him a note which read as follows:—

"I kill myself. Berthemy come back and stay.

(signed) F. PARADOL."

The Jury returned a verdict in accordance with the foregoing.

Upon receiving intelligence of M. Paradol's death, the Emperor Napoleon has ordered M. Berthemy, the late Minister, to return to Washington.

RENTES.—Many of our readers may not have a full understanding of the word "rentes," which occurs so constantly just now in our foreign dispatches, and whose rise and fall seem to constitute the financial barometer of Paris. They are the funded debt of France, not, however, in the form of bonds, but simply loans from the people. These loans are entered to the credit of the lenders on the Government ledgers and draw a specified rate of interest. The holders of the debt are called "rentiers," and the fluctuations in its value denote popular distrust or confidence in the Government.

THE SWEDISH COLONISTS.

The Aroostook Pioneer gives the following account of the Swedish colonists brought over by Mr Thomas J. The earliest news with which the Swedes chafed in the new country was of settling Aroostook, enabling Mr. Thomas to fill his quota with the very best, who applied, from all of whom he required a certificate of good moral character, signed by their pastor, of mechanics, over-seers from their employers, stating the degree of skill possessed individually. Farmers their proficiency in the calling. If laborers, whether industrious, quick, temperate and honest. All the necessary requirements were complied with, and a class of people obtained, each family of which will be an acquisition to to the State many times the value of its donation.

From a rush of applications to fill the colony, a selection of about one hundred men, women and children was made, fifty of whom got ready and started with Mr. T. for America the 25th of June. Of this number, there are about ten families complete, the remainder being heads of families who will prepare a home and send for their wives and children next spring. There are also several smart, intelligent young men who have formed an attachment for certain interesting members of other families, to whom 'tis said they will no doubt become more closely connected.

At Liverpool they embarked on board the steamship "City of Antwerp" of the Inman line, and arrived in Halifax, N. S., last Wednesday morning. Comfortable quarters were provided for them during the twenty hours they were obliged to remain in that city, and Thursday morning, bright and early, Mr. Thomas started with his family and their two tons of baggage by rail for Annapolis where the steamer Empress of the Union line, was waiting to take them to St. John, which port was reached [illegible] o'clock p. m. Anticipating their arrival, [illegible] crowd which is always [illegible] upon the wharf on the boat's arrival, and [illegible] the pleasure of meeting Mr. Thomas, who report[illegible] a pleasant passage and the [illegible] carrying out of the programme arranged before he left home. On the Landing at his charge, we were both pleased and surprised to find such an intelligent looking class of people—rugged, healthy, and respectably dressed, among whom sickness is a stranger.

Comfortable quarters were provided in the steamer's store-house for all who did not choose to take lodgings in the hotels. Procuring a fresh supply of provisions at the Mill Street bakeries, and engaging drays to cart the baggage to Indiantown Friday morning about half past seven, a breakfast is across the city such as did not [illegible] Indiantown [illegible] o'clock, the steamer D[illegible] W. started with the Scandinavians on the Fredericton.

On our passage up the [illegible] we made the acquaintance of two members of the colony, Messrs. Johnson and Clase, who [illegible] good English, and are remarkably well informed. Mr. Johnson was nine years in Australia, and has with him some fine specimens of "filthy lucre" which he dug with his own hands, some of which he had taken into a very handsome watch case. Mr. Clase, who has been a sea captain, ought to [illegible] and he [illegible] very proud of his new and children, who appear to be very happy in anticipation of their new home. One marked feature of these people is their [illegible] which is high, nearly all of which have blue eyes. Their household [illegible] worthy of note even among the small children, who recognize the smallest [illegible] by removing their hats and making their [illegible] the hand. The ladies were observed reading books in their own tongue, while some of the young men were engaged with English without a teacher. They are all anxious to obtain a knowledge of our language, being educated [illegible]

Capt. Watson, who [illegible] was surprised by [illegible] at their arrival, had provided ample accommodation on board the steamer Tobique [illegible] a comfortable night. [illegible] next morning at 4 o'clock per tow boat, [illegible] arrived at Tobique [illegible] will remain until the [illegible] and wealth [illegible] Wednesday night, 20th. From [illegible] they will be [illegible] by teams to their [illegible] houses and [illegible] which the State [illegible] provided, but which [illegible] they will [illegible] appreciate [illegible] three years, and when [illegible] they can [illegible] destined to be one of the [illegible] in the [illegible] and when [illegible] they [illegible] per cent. The [illegible] mechanics of various [illegible] which they [illegible] skilled. We are [illegible] that they are all honest, industrious [illegible] and thrifty, inured to hard [illegible] and pains [illegible] or labor. Every one of them is a leading [illegible] to a hundred friends at home, and the settlers will drain [illegible] is confident and prosperous.

WAR [illegible] IN DUBLIN.—A great, popular demonstration in favor of France was made in Dublin on Tuesday evening, in which more than 100,000 persons are said to have been out with bands of music, all carrying the French and Irish flags entwined. The police charged on the crowd, rallied and captured the flag, but the crowd rallied and retook them. The affair passed off the most intense excitement.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.—Baron Gerolt, the Prussian Minister, is in New York, but declines being interviewed.

Hon. Jas. G. Blaine reached Augusta, on Monday evening, in excellent health.

Gen. Humphrey Marshall announces himself a candidate for Congress, from the Louisville District, Kentucky.

Gen. Sheridan having obtained permission of the War Department to visit Europe and observe the military operations in progress there, left Chicago yesterday for the seat of war. He will be accompanied, by a single member of his staff, and will visit both the French and Prussian armies; the expenses of the trip to be borne by himself.

The N. Y. Sun has engaged Wm. H. (Bull Run) Russell, of London, as a special war correspondent.

Congressman Cox, of New York, was banqueted by his constituents on Tuesday evening, and spoke for a half hour on the political situation.

The Republicans of the 11th district of Pennsylvania, on Tuesday, nominated A. W. Taylor, of Indiana County, for member of Congress.

The Boston Post says Gen. Schenck has informed several gentlemen that he has positively determined not again to be a candidate for Congress. He is to be engaged, with a third and emigration company next year, at a salary of $12,000, and one of the populations is that he will not accept a political office.

General A. Starring has been appointed Consular Agent for the Treasury Department, and will have the pairs of England, France and Germany under his special [illegible]ervision.

...ermann furnished the Emperor of the French with a pretext for war. Scorning peace, he had indulged in such language to Germany which could only have been prompted by the misunderstanding of her strength. Germany was powerful enough to resist such insolence and repel such violence. He said so in all reverence, kneeling that the event was in God's hands. He did fully weighed the responsibility which rested on him who drives into war and havoc two great and tranquil nations yearning for peace and the encouragement of the common blessings of Christian civilization and prosperity and for contests, mean, in those for blood.—Those who rule French hearts steadily still the proper methods of hitting the sore spot—the pride of that great neighbor nation, and to promote their interests have misguided it. Silesia, concluded that King, as our fathers before us have done, left us fight for our liberty and our rights against the wrongs inflicted by a foreign conqueror, and as He was with our others so God will be with us in a struggle without which Europe can never enjoy lasting peace.

FROM THE BRIGHT—THE PRUSSIANS GIVE THE FRENCH BOISTEROUS — THE KEY CALLING OUT RESERVES.

London, July 20. A gentleman who has just returned from a trip up the Rhine tells his experience to the Times this morning.—He says that the German army is quiet, grave, anxious and resolute. On the other hand, the French are yelling, drinking, swaggering, and literally spoiling for a fight. He says that for every one German soldier, he saw a hundred Frenchmen.

Vienna, July 20. Turkey has called out her reserves and stopped the telegraphs in all directions.

Paris, July 20. The officers of the Bank of France announce an advance in the rates of interest to 5½ per cent.

London, July 20. Telegraphic communication between France and Germany has been destroyed by the authorities.

HEAVY PRUSSIAN LOAN, VOTED—THE FRENCH CROSSING THE FRONTIER.

Berlin, July 20. The most perfect harmony exists in the Governments of all the North German States.

In the Reichs Chamber, yesterday, Baron de Frizsch, Minister of Finances, made a speech telling the Deputies that France was as anxious for war and that she could have it as sharply and severely as possible. His remarks were greeted enthusiastically. In the North German Parliament, after the King's speech had been delivered, a number a hundred and twenty million thalers was carried unanimously amid the wildest expression of enthusiasm by all parties.

Cologne, July 20. The French passed the frontier near Schrebruken. (Zweibrucken?) last evening and seized the Custom House.

IMPERIAL MATCHMAKING—A NEW CASUS BELLI.

Berlin, July 20. It is said that the failure of the intrigue by the Empress Eugenie to marry her niece, the Duchess of Alba, to Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern, is the real source of the present trouble between France and Prussia. The father of the Duchess is now in Madrid, drowned in debt and generally despised.

All Germans in the service of the French have been ordered to return forthwith. The Prussian Government has announced that merchantmen, even of the enemy, will not be interfered with on the high seas, unless for a cause which would expose neutrals to seizure.

General Wiedel, Adjutant-General of Hanover, has been arrested at Weimar as a spy.

NAPOLEON'S DETHRONEMENT THE GERMAN ULTIMATUM.

Paris, July 20. No newspaper correspondents, French or foreign, will be allowed to accompany the French army.

London, July 20. Germany makes the abdicatement of the Bonapartes its ultimatum.

The Liverpool markets yesterday were utterly prostrated. Nothing was ever known like the commercial depression. Many men worth one hundred thousand pounds sterling a day or two ago are bankrupt to-day. Business in yarns and fabrics at Manchester, was also completely paralyzed.

London, July 20. No news of any engagement, either by land or sea has been received here.

The rumors of alliances are still rumors only. No authentic information of any power having taken sides with either of the combatants, have been made public.

PROCLAMATION OF WAR BY M. OLLIVIER IN THE CORPS LEGISLATIF.

Paris, July 20. An American resident here, Dr. Evans, has given 10,000 francs to the society to aid the wounded soldiers of France.

In the Corps Legislatif to-day, M. Gramont announced that war had been declared with Prussia and her allies in the following words: "The exposé presented to you on the 15th inst., made known the cause we have for war against Prussia." According to the rules and usages of nations, and by order of the Emperor, I have requested the Minister of Foreign Affairs at Berlin to notify the Cabinets of Prussia of our resolution to seek with arms the guarantees we could not obtain by discussions. This has been done, and I have the honor to make known to the Corps Legislatif, in state of war exists between France and Prussia. This declaration applies to the allies of Prussia, who give her armed assistance."

ARREST OF SWISS ARMY OFFICERS.

Bale, Switzerland, July 20. A General of the Swiss army and several other officers of high rank have been arrested in Germany.

ORGANIZATION OF AN AMERICAN SANITARY COMMISSION.

Paris, July 20. The Deputies in the Corps Legislatif sign liberal subscriptions for the 10,000 francs to

A meeting of citizens of the United States was held at the residence of Dr. C. Evans last night to take measures for the organization of a Sanitary Commission. It is proposed that the Commission shall operate with the International and French Societies in aid of the wounded. Dr. Evans has placed at the disposal of the new organization a report of the Sanitary Commission and a collection of models of ambulances, stretchers, hospital tents and other appliances used by the Commission during the late war. A donation of 10,000 francs was also made by Dr. Evans as the nucleus for a sanitary fund.

The La Liberte asserts that M. Vluergate has gone to Florence with a treaty of alliance between France and Italy. The same paper says that in case Denmark joins France in war, the Princes of Orleans will serve in the Danish army.

A rich merchant of Mulhouse has offered to equip 5000 volunteers and supply them with rations during the war.

RUMORS OF AN ENGAGEMENT.

London, July 20—1 P. M. It is rumored that a collision took place this morning near Forbach, between the French and Prussian advanced guard. Nothing further is known of the affair and some doubt is cast on the report as advices from Paris fully are positive that there has been no fighting.

Earl Granville reports that the determined and absolute refusal of the Emperor Napoleon to entertain negotiations, render it probable that any attempt to renew them will be useless until a great battle has been fought.

LATEST NEWS.

London 20th. The Standard this evening says that the recent panic in stocks, is altogether due to croakers. People on 'Change were caught with customers' orders that had not unfavorable, necessitating a realization at any prices."

London 20th. The family of the late Chas. Dickens have declined Lord's offer of $2000 for the manuscript of "Edwin Drood."

A SCENE IN COURT.

Paris 20th. In the High Court of Justice yesterday M. Floquet, a recent candidate, moved that all of the papers be read separately. Among these documents he grounded his motion—one was that those men had nothing to do with the allied bombs. In the course of his argument the called Megy, one of the jurors, a Monarchist, and was interrupted by the President of the Court, who pointed out that to utter this grave offense with which the prisoners were charged he should not be thus addressed. This interference of the Court caused a scene between the counsel of the prisoners and the Procureur General found Perrin. The latter demanded that M. Floquet be ordered to leave the court-room. M. Lavier, one of the counsel, then addressed the Court in behalf of his brief. The chief advocate for the prisoners did the same, and all the counsel for the prisoners withdrew from the court-room.

Paris, July 20—3 p. m. The Bourse is growing weaker. Rumors out are to the effect and are now quite current.

There were some small battles between the patrols and custom house officers, but no blood shed.

The Emperor did not come to Paris to-day. He received the Ministers yesterday. Rather than the old and is similar to the system of working convicts in use some Northern States.—The report was made a special order for Wednesday.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Friday that no election be held in this State until the adjournment of the Legislature in Congress, and that all election laws not suitable to the present condition of the State, be repealed.—It was reported that this was adopted in the Republican caucus last night.

Both Houses have adjourned until Friday.

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, July 20.

Secretary Fish to-day telegraphed to Minister Washburne instructions to inform the French government of the sudden death of M. Paradol. The President has ordered a guard of honor over the remains of M. Paradol at his late residence.

Secretary Boutwell to-day opened bids for the exclusive privilege of catching fur seals on the islands of St. George and St. Paul, in Alaska, for 20 years from May 1, 1870. There were seventeen bids, ranging from $103,100 per annum. The Alaska Commercial Company had the preference of Congress and would have secured the contract had they tried within 10 per cent. of the highest bidder, but their offer was the lowest of all. The decision was reserved.

The President will leave on the 7:40 to-morrow for Long Branch. The party will consist besides the President, of Mrs. Grant, Miss Nellie Grant, Jesse Grant, U. S. Grant, Jr., Mrs. Fish, Lieut. Dent, Miss Maggie Dent and Gen. Horace Porter.

(the [illegible] same conveyance) to Castine on Monday, 25th, where they will join with Lincoln Lodge of Buckport, in a grand clam bake.

FATAL ACCIDENT. About half-past ten o'clock yesterday forenoon, as Mr. Edgar W. Simpson of Hampden, a mason employed on the high [illegible] was, with a fellow-workman, rolling a piece of granite weighing 600 or 900 lbs. along the side of the building on the front of the [illegible] building, the pier of the stone displaced a standard on the inner side of the staging, allowing the ends of the planks on which they stood to slip and the cross-piece which sustained them, and fell. The other man escaped by clinging to the building, but Simpson was precipitated to the floor of the portico, together with the stone, a tall mortar-tub and a number of planks, breaking through and [illegible] staging at the second story in his descent. The shockingly crushed. Mr. Simpson retained his [illegible] and when men came to take him up, told them he should never do any more work [illegible] time he did come. He was carefully carried into the County Commissioners' room in the Court House and Drs. Searey and Morrison immediately called. Upon examination, it was found that he had received numerous cuts and bruises, but the most serious was on the [illegible] which was crushed in so that the [illegible] covering of the lung was ruptured and a portion of the lung [illegible] and with every breath the air would escape into the cavity of the chest. His body was swathed in broad bandages, and he was conveyed to his boarding-place on Fourth street, where after suffering more than mortal pain he died at half-past [illegible] o'clock in the afternoon. He was between 25 and 30 years of age, and leaves a young wife and a son of five years. This was the first accident which has occurred on the building, and we are assured by competent judges that the staging would have been perfectly safe, had the stone been handled more carefully.

—A little son of John Pierson Esq. had a narrow escape from death yesterday. He was sitting astride a horse belonging to the firm of Hills & Pearson, when the animal took fright and ran rapidly on York street. The little fellow bravely clinging to the reins for a long distance, until his hold was broken, when he fell to the ground, and the wagon attached to the horse passed over him. The bystanders hastened to pick him up, supposing he was severely injured but found he had escaped with a few bruises. The horse pursued his course until he had smashed the wagon pretty thoroughly.

—The "Mere-sham man" who has lately visited Portland has been in this city for the past few days, and has sold his valuable (?) pipes to nearly a dozen persons. His method of sale is to enter a place of business, smoking what is apparently a well-colored, high-priced meerschaum, and saying that he is a poor man and hard up, request a loan of $10 only. Upon examination the pipe appears to be genuine, and is usually sold for $9 to $10. The unsuspecting buyer is sold too, as a number of smokers in Bangor can testify as well as the half-dozen or more mentioned in the Lewiston and Portland papers.

DROWNED. We are informed by Mr. Moster, that Mr. John Jackson, of Alfred, a student at the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts at Orono was drowned while bathing in the Stillwater river at that place on Tuesday evening. Mr. Jackson was about twenty-six years of age, and a man of much promise. His scientific attainments are spoken of as remarkable considering the limited opportunities he had in early life for obtaining an education. We are informed that he leaves no near relatives.

—The Semi-Centennial Anniversary of the Theological Seminary in this city occurs on Thursday, July 28th. The Examination will commence on the preceding Tuesday, in the morning, and will close at noon on Wednesday. The address before the Societies will be on Tuesday evening, by Prof. J. S. Seelye of Amherst College. An Historical Address, by Dr. Pond, will be delivered on Wednesday afternoon, and there will be a meeting for addresses, by Alumni and others, on Wednesday evening. The exercises of the Anniversary proper, by the graduating class, will be on Thursday forenoon.

PENOBSCOT COUNTY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION. The Penobscot County Medical Association held its regular meeting at City Hall yesterday afternoon, D. A. G. Hamlin, President, in the Chair. The meeting was well attended, and the usual degree of interest manifested. Several interesting cases were reported. Dr. Walton exhibited a Polypous Tumor, recently removed by a surgical operation; also introduced a patient afflicted with an enormous scrofulous disease of the abdomen. Drs. Jones and Morrison commented upon cases of importance which were under their immediate care. Remarks were made by other members upon various medical topics, and after a lengthy session the Association adjourned to the 3d Tuesday in August.

LATEST NEWS IN BRIEF.

Banks & Co., Bankers of San Francisco, are announced as having suspended on Tuesday.

The average temperature in New York on Tuesday was 90. Thirty-five cases of death by sunstroke were reported, and thirty cases which were not fatal.

Judge Barnard, of New York, on Tuesday granted a motion transferring the suits arising from the September gold panic to the Supreme Court. There are sixteen suits, with a total amount of damages estimated at $1,422,000.

Several large shippers of specie in New York withdrew their contracts yesterday; but the Java was expected to take out $2,000,000 and the Colorado $600,000.

After two days examination at Providence, R. I., of the widow, three children and manservant, of the late Wm. F. Angell, of whose murder they were accused, they have been discharged and the complaint withdrawn, as the testimony elicited did not implicate the accused parties in the least degree.

There were only three bids, amounting to $125,000 for the million of gold offered by the Government yesterday, the highest being at 132 09/100 and the lowest 130 05/100. The awards were not made known.

A movement is in progress in New York for the establishment of a new line of ocean steamships, under the American flag; but nothing will be done until the war assumes such a shape that some patronage can be shown for such a line. James Fisk, Jr., is said to be negotiating for several of the North German Lloyds Steamers.

The Frankfort Gazette in an editorial, asks how the cause of the war concerns the people of France or Germany, and intimates that the question is one between the monarchs of the respective countries, and says that the people do not feel at all interested in it.

The United States Steamers Nipsic and Guard, recently returned to New York from the Darien Expedition, have been ordered to the fishing grounds, and the Essex will remain in Canadian waters under instructions to grant protection to our fishermen.

—Mr. Thomas Hillhouse, the new Assistant Treasurer at New York, has filed his bond, and four clerks have been sent to New York to count and weigh the money deposited in the Sub-Treasury. It is said there are about 225 tons of gold on hand.

—A plan for providing a magnificent system of docks for New York city was sent into the commissioners yesterday by William Wilson, consulting engineer of Liverpool and London docks. He proposes to inclose the space between the Battery and Governor's Island with a sea wall, within and upon which shall be built docks and ware-houses. The basin would give 160 acres of water area, being 13 acres more than the area of the celebrated Liverpool docks, and the whole would cost $10,000,000.

—VENEZUELA. A letter from Laguayra, dated July 1, says that the affairs in Venezuela are very unsettled and critical. The Monagas party hold all the ports except Laguayra. Cargoes are still carried into Port Maracaibo, although closed to foreign commerce. The Dutch ambassador has left the country, on account of the hostilities toward himself and the Dutch residents, and the Dutch Frigate will enforce an apology. The brig Emma Dean, of New York, loaded with arms, was seized, but has been released.

—Senators Pomeroy of Kansas, and Chandler of Michigan, and other notabilities are in Lowell, Mass., to attend the wedding of Senator Ames and Miss Butler.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

We would say to the Agents of the Buckeye Mower, that the maker of the $2000 is perfectly responsible for the same, and is ready to test the Buckeye with the Advance on five tests, which is all that is necessary in a mowing machine.

1st—Which will cut a half acre the quickest in best of grass, two tons to the acre.

2d—Which will cut same stout grass the easiest for the team in the judgment of the Committee.

3d—Which will cut same stout grass the best on the slowest walk of the team, and choke and clog the least.

4th—Which will start in the cut, the most times without missing in the same stout grass.

5th—Which will cut the thinnest, driest grass when and the best on the slowest walk of the team.

6th—On lightness of draught, which we will decide by mowing down [illegible] the one that has the slickest [illegible] the machine running upon the horses and doing its work well—to be called the lightest draught.

If the Buckeye can stand these tests with the Advance,—each of them—and also show other points of excellence which the Advance Mower possesses, then we will admit her to be an equal of the Advance.

THE ONE SWEET THING THAT IS LOST TO ME.

BY HOWARD GLYNDON.

The day is off the full-blown rose,
And the wind will float it before he goes;
And the down is brushed from the yellow peach
And the purplest grapes are out of reach—
And I am sad as sad can be,
For a sweeter thing is no more for me.

Why will you make me say it twice?
Leave joy alls to its own device!
All you say that my hand is cold,
I say that my heart is numb and old,
I say I am as sad as sad can be,
That love, sweet love, is no more for me!

But I—I would love you, if I could,
I would health to you in tenderhood,
I am so weary of being alone,
I needs must make this piteous moan;
My soul is famished so utterly
That the one sweet thing that is lost for me.

You should have come in the Long Ago,
Before my heart went under the snow—
You should have come while the violets bloomed,
Ere the sweet blush-roses were all entombed—
Before I was sad as sad can be,
While love, sweet love, was the world to me!

Now, for the good I should receive
I have so little left to give,
I am ashamed that your love should lie
Low at the foot of such as I—
Let me be sad as sad can be
That this sweet thing is not for me.

Kiss me but once, upon the brow—
Promise to be my friend from now;
Pity me that I cannot love—
Pity me all the world above—
Leave me as sad as sad can be
For the one sweet thing that is lost to me.

[Lippincott's Magazine for August.

AN ENGLISH STORY.

"Not at all, Mr. Morrion, and you are quite right. You have, I hear, been a long time in the family, and now, I see, intend to remain so. He is, I believe, a proud man.

"Well, yes; he's a right to be that I expect," the butler said, cautiously.

"Quite so, quite so, Mr. Morrion," but I am sad to think he has no child to come after him."

"Ay, ay," the butler said. "It is all that."

"His only son, as I have heard," his interrogator said, "made a match beneath it, and his father never forgave him, never saw him again."

"Ay," said the butler, "but that wasn't master's fault. He was away, and the letter telling us how Master Charles were ill was got to him for a week; and then the worst of post-haste to France. I know, for he took me with him; and when we got down to Marsel, we found he was dead, and his wife, too; and that the child, who was only a mite old, was gone—no one know where. He'd left all his money to Dacre."

"Thank God, thank God!" the other said; "this is good news indeed. Poor little Kitty! Thank God!" and he covered his face with his hands and cried.

For some time the butler could only gaze at him in astonishment; at last he said:

"And who may you be, sir? and what do you know of the child?"

"I am her grandfather too," the man said. And the child is asleep in the next room."

"I am glad," the butler said excitedly, "as glad as if it was my own. But why did you never come before? I know master advertised in every paper."

"I never saw them. I only knew that I had been written for on the same day I left. He never came, and I supposed would not bury dead child and her husband, and the baby, and I have kept it ever since. And I love her as I loved her mother before her. But she is over five years old now; and I thought that it was time to try if her grandfather—who I believed had never forgiven his son, even when he knew he was dying—would take his son's child. Thank God that, from what you say, he will do."

"Do so!" the butler said; "proud as Sir John is—and he is proud—there is nothing in the world he would not have done to find her out."

The conversation lasted some time longer, and then Mr. Merrion took his leave, and went straight home, without, to Mrs. Martin's great disappointment, revealing one word of what had taken place at the long and mysterious interview.

The next evening Sir John Barton was sitting alone after his dinner. A tall, stately man, but with marks of deep sorrow on his face. A proud, reserved man, the world said, and in his youth no doubt truly; but sorrow had man still, but scarcely a proud one. At the present moment Sir John was wondering over the behavior of his butler, John Merrion, at dinner. John was ordinarily one of the most staid and respectful of domestics, but John had behaved throughout dinner in a manner quite unlike himself. If such a thing had not been out of the question, he should have said that John Merrion was drunk. He had broken two glasses, he had spilled the wine in filling up his glasses, and the man's eyes were certainly full of water. His master had asked what was the matter, and he had replied, "Nothing, Sir John;" but of course something was the matter, although as the footman was in the room Sir John had passed the matter over. Sir John now turned over in his mind. John Merrion had been a widower for years, and his only son was now head-groom. Perhaps one of his children was ill, Sir John had heard nothing of it, but he thought he would ring and ask. At this moment the door opened a little, and the sound of a man crying was plainly heard through it, and then the barone thought he was dreaming, when a child with long, golden hair, with a white frock, rested her head, came up towards him, first in a half timid, yet frank and confident way, and putting her hand in his, said:

"Please, grandpa, my name is Kitty Barton and I am come to stay with you and love you. Please, this is papa's likeness, and a letter."

And she held out a gold locket, and a letter directed in the well remembered hand writing of his dead son.

For a moment the baronet sat speechless. Then with a cry of, "Thank God, thank God for his mercy!" he caught the child up and held her close to his heart, while his tears ran down upon her sunny head.

"Don't cry, grandpa; don't cry," she said, presently beginning to sob herself at the sight of his emotion. "If grandpa sorry, Kitty go away again."

"No, no, my child; I am not sorry; I am only glad, only very thankful you have come."

Kitty looked up a little doubtfully.

"Kitty never cries when she glad," she said; "she cry when she hurt herself."

For something the baronet held her closer in his arms kissing her; then when he became calmer, he put her down on the rug before the fire, placed the letter and portrait by to be examined when no eye could see him, and rang the bell. John Merrion entered, his eyes red with crying.

"You knew of this, John?"

"Yes, Sir John; thank God she has come!"

"Ah, indeed, John, thank God!" and the master and servant wrung each other's hands in the fullness of their feelings. "Now, John, send the other servants here."

In a few minutes they entered. They had all heard from the butler what had happened, and many of them who had known their late young master were wiping their eyes as they entered.

"Listen all of you," the baronet said, with a proud joy. "This young lady is my grandchild, Miss Barton. She will live here in future. You will look upon her as your future mistress, and the heiress of this place Mrs. Lethridge," he said to the house-keeper "will you see a bed prepared for her in the little room next to mine?"

Several of the elder women came forward and kissed Kitty; who was rather alarmed at all this; and the house-keeper said, "Will you come to me, dearie?"

"No thank you," Kitty answered taking tight hold of the baronet's hand; "I would rather stay with grandpa."

When they had all left the room, Kitty took her seat on a footstool at Sir John's feet, and looked gravely into the fire, while the baronet stroked her hair quietly, and had difficulty in persuading himself it was all true. Presently Kitty spoke.

"What a big fire, grandpa! I never saw such a big fire, and it is hardly cold at all. What a lot of money it must cost!"

"It is a large room, Kitty and you see I was all alone; so I had a fire for company."

Kitty opened her eyes a little wider, even than usual, and remained some time in thought, the result of her reflection showed itself in her next speech.

"Please, grandpa, Kitty hungry; she would like some supper."

The baronet hastily rang the bell. The butler appeared.

"John, bring some with some toast and cold chicken."

"And potatoes," said Kitty.

"And potatoes," added the baronet, "if you have any."

"Yes, Sir John; there are sure to be some ready for the supper-down stairs."

"With their skins on," Kitty said hastily.

"With their skins on, of course," the baronet said gravely.

When the butler had left the room, Kitty again climbed upon her grandfather's knee.

"Ain't going to have chicken for supper?" she asked.

"Yes, my dear, if you like it."

"Kitty doesn't know," she said rather doubtfully. "Kitty never tasted chicken. Will it have its feathers on?"

"No, Kitty; the feathers are taken off."

Kitty looked relieved.

"Sometimes Kitty has had sausages for supper; John said he's confidential, coder. For you know, and grandpa, you know, my other grandpa"—she nodded—"always saved coder for Kitty to eat cold for breakfast."

The baronet's brow clouded for a moment at the mention of this other relation of his grandchild; and then he said, kindly:

"Was he very kind to you? Did you love him very much, your other grandpa?"

"Kitty love him, so much—that's all," holding out her arms; "love him much bigger, he so kind to Kitty. Poor grandpa very sad to-day, and cry, you know, that make Kitty sorry. Poor grandpa!"

The baronet felt by his own joy at finding her how great must be the sorrow of the other at his having lost us.

Kitty nodded.

"Gave Kitty message. If you want to see him, you write; he come there in the morning."
